FOREWORD

With this publication, the University Library initiates a series of Studies designed to further the state and nation's awareness of the valuable resources available here. This series will consist primarily of bibliographical studies, particularly in those areas for which our library is pre-eminent. Literary and other related studies may be offered from time to time and as funds permit. It is hoped that these publications will be useful and that their publication may lead to increased production of similar materials. The Editor will welcome the submission of appropriate manuscripts, and the Library will carefully consider each publication proposed.

PREFACE

A casual glance through this bibliography will indicate that the story of few of North Carolina's one hundred counties has been told in an adequate fashion. During recent years there have been several good county histories published, but only a beginning has been made. Before many years have passed even these histories will need to be revised and brought up-to-date. Recording local history is a never-ending process. Just as human events continue to move along the stream of time so must the recorder of events remain active.

In this bibliography I have attempted to list all of the county histories published in book form. To fill out the picture I have included the series of soil surveys published by the Federal Government. These surveys, in addition to including one or more interesting and detailed maps of the county, also give geographical information and often contain worthwhile information on the early history and settlement of the county. Articles from The State magazine have also been included since they often provide the only readily available source of recent information on many of the counties. Frequently during the past several years The State has devoted the major portion of an entire issue to a single county.

The material recorded here has been found in three places: The North Carolina Collection, University of North Carolina Library, Chapel Hill; The North Carolina State Library, Raleigh; and The State Department of Archives and History, Raleigh. Except for periodical material (The State, for example), most of this material can be had on inter-library loan or through the extension service of the State Library and in many cases from other libraries in the state. Often public libraries make a point of collecting local history and they are a fruitful source for information in this field.

This bibliography was first issued by the State Department of Archives and History in 1952; revised editions appeared in 1954 and 1957. Our thanks are due Mr. D. L. Corbitt, Head of the Division of Publications of that Department, for permitting the use of his stencils from the 1957 revision. A few minor changes have been made to include material which appeared late in the year.
